“Excellence characterizes a school that sets high expectations and goals for all learners, then tries in every way possible to help students reach them.”

Excellence in education is on the agenda at Enrico Fermi High School. Ready for occupancy in 1971, Fermi had a budget exceeding six million dollars. The result was a school that the town of Enfield displayed with pride. Today, Fermi High School continues to be rated as one of the finest schools in the state of Connecticut.

The supportive faculty at Fermi, coupled with the school's curriculum, assist the student body in attaining a well-rounded education. The high level of understanding which exists between the students and faculty creates communication. Thus, when a student leaves Fermi, he leaves not only with a knowledge of the academics, but with an awareness of himself and the world around him. This knowledge will help every student gain success.

Fermi High is a center for community involvement. It not only educates the town's youth, but it offers its facilities to the public. The school's planetarium presents the opportunity for students in all grades to study the astronomical sciences. Fermi is also privileged to possess a swimming pool. It serves the town's swim teams and swimming classes. In addition, the library facility at Fermi is noted for its excellence. It shelves nearly nine thousand hard cover volumes and over six hundred reference books, including newly added editions from the recently closed Kosciuszko Junior High. That averages out to approximately 5.1 books per student, not including the vast supply of paperbacks. Furthermore, thirteen hundred pieces of audio visual materials and equipment are utilized. Fermi also hosts the Enfield Adult Education Program and invites the public to participate in the education process.

Anyone involved with the learning process has the right to demand excellence in education from schools. Fermi meets those demands and invites not only students and teachers, but also parents and the community to be a part of its educational goal. Learning is a lifetime objective, and, in order for a school to be successful, this idea must be mirrored by society. Fermi accepts its role in the educational challenge presented today.

DEDICATION

When this year's graduating class entered Fermi High School as sophomores, during the fall of 1981, we were at a great advantage to have Mrs. Sharon Palmer, the head librarian, volunteer as one of our faculty advisors. Our first year at Fermi was a time of trial and error, but with the guidance and support she extended to our class, we were able to learn from our mistakes and proceed in the right direction. She has led our class through dances, proms, homecoming events, the magazine drive, and the graduation ceremony. Largely due to your efforts and devotion, we, the Class of 1984, dedicate our book, Traces, to you, Mrs. Palmer.

The school library is a vital part of the complete educational opportunity offered to students at Fermi. Since Mrs. Palmer's addition to the staff, her expertise has increased the professionalism of the Fermi faculty. She has vastly improved the facilities of the library, and she has also been active in the Human Involvement program, which includes training library aides. Mrs. Palmer utilizes her knowledge and assistance to guarantee that both students and faculty will fully take advantage of the library facilities.

Mrs. Palmer, you have been both a leader and a friend, and our success as a class is in proportion to your devotion. It is said that if you give to the world the best that you have, the best will come back to you. This will surely be the case with you. In gratitude, the Class of 1984 wishes to offer you their best.

The 1983 National Commission of Excellence in Education's report "An Open Letter to the American People, A Nation at Risk" is the result of an eighteen month study of the American educational system. According to this task force, existing educational standards are not meeting the demands of today's society. This report recommends a renewal of the nation's commitment to schools and colleges throughout the United States. Enrico Fermi High School challenges this report by offering academic excellence.

A total education, including the acquisition of academic skills as well as those talents obtained through participation in sports, clubs, or organizations, is available to every student at our school.

When educational standards are questioned, It is possible for society to lose sight of the basic purpose of schooling.

The aim is to develop the talents of all students, and to develop them to the fullest. Attaining this goal requires that we must demand and expect all students to work to the limits of their capabilities. We must challenge them with the maximum standards, rather than with the minimum ones.

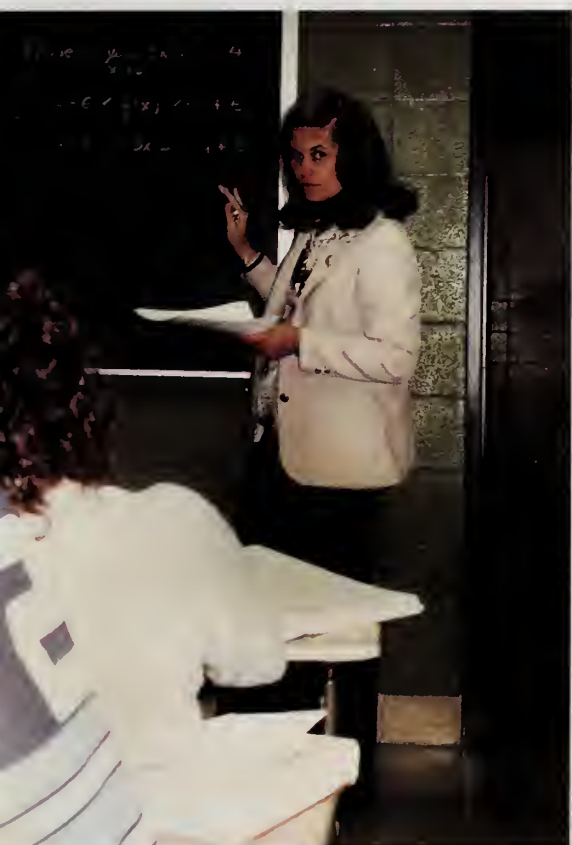

Recently, to raise our standards, the Board of Education has installed more rigid requirements for graduation. First, the passing grade standard has been changed from 60 to 65. Therefore, students must put forth greater effort.

Secondly, graduation standards have become more rigorous. To graduate a senior must achieve an overall academic average of a 4.0 (or C-), earn four units of English, two of Science, Social Studies, and Math, and one of Physical Education. Students must carry a full schedule equivalent to a minimum of 5¼ credits each year, and he must pass a minimum of four classes.

In addition, Fermi now offers weighted grade courses. This study encourages students to make the most of their talents and abilities. These courses require students to stretch their personal limits through higher expectations and goals. Consequently, the marking system rewards them for this personal extension. Also, there are level one classes offered to college bound juniors and seniors. In some cases, eligible students can attain college credit from the University of Connecticut. The courses which offer this credit are: Calculus, Probability and Statistics, Advanced Biology, Chemistry, Physics, and Advanced Level Spanish and French. This year, Freshman English has been added as well.

In order to become eligible for Fermi High School's sports program, students are required to meet new academic and conduct standards. To participate in interscholastic athletic contests, students must carry an overall 4.0 (C-) academic average each quarter. Students must also be good citizens and worthy representatives of our school. Repeated infractions of school rules, poor attendance or other evidence of poor citizenship will render a student ineligible.

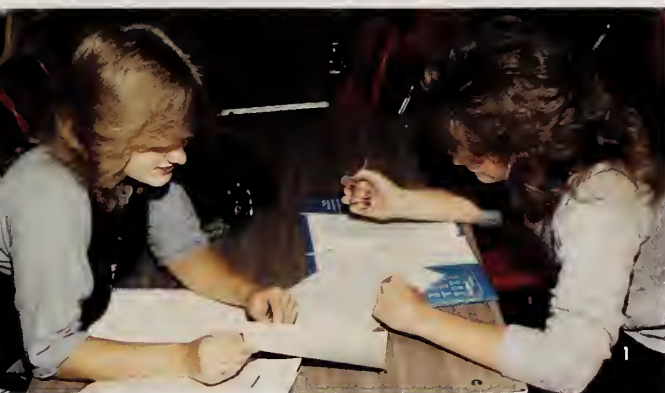

In conclusion, Enrico Fermi High School agrees with the commissions report when it states: "When you give only the minimum to learning, you receive only the minimum in return . . . in the end it is your work that determines how much and how well you learn. When you work to your full capacity, you can hope to attain the knowledge and skills that will enable you to create your future and control your destiny. If you do not, you will have your future thrust upon you by others. Take hold of your life, apply your gifts and talents, work with dedication and self discipline." Therefore, each student at Enrico Fermi High School must increase his expectations and "convert every challenge offered" by this school into an opportunity.

1. Bryan Shewokis and Noelle Wojciehowski are challenged by their chemistry labs.
2. Karen Jones is taking a "crash course" in Driver's Education.
3. At the scene of the crime, Tim Cutter cleans up the evidence.

Faculty

A teacher cannot make a student learn; that is the student's choice. A teacher must open the door to the learning process by demonstrating, through a positive attitude, that he believes in what he is teaching. This positive attitude, in turn, will motivate students. The teaching profession is "based on the beliefs that everyone can learn and that everyone is born with an urge to learn which can be nurtured . . ."

Fermi's teachers, who respect this philosophy and realize the importance of it, will be successful in affecting students. Hard work, dedication, and effective communication are all methods by which teachers can encourage students to learn. According to Kahlil Gibran, "If he is indeed wise, he does not bid you enter the house of his wisdom, but rather leads you to the threshold of your own mind." If a teacher is successful, his students will pass through this threshold and enjoy a lifelong learning process.

We, the class of 1984, would like to thank those teachers who encourage students to make the choice to learn.

“The ability to communicate effectively has always been of paramount importance in education.”

Principal: Mr. Mario A. Gentile

Communication is a well chosen theme for your yearbook. The ability to communicate effectively has always been of paramount importance in education. The National Commission on Excellence in Education has underlined that fact. Bearing this in mind, it seems most fitting to examine some other aspects of the subject.

The need to communicate with other members of the human race has always been with us. Present day technology has made us ever so much more cognizant of that fact. Peoples of the world are closer than ever due to the communication revolution and now stand on the brink of an exciting, unbelievable future in the company of communication satellites, and the ever more amazing computers.

You are embarking upon your life's work at an especially dramatic time in man's history. Your ability to communicate effectively, as well as to use the newest tools of communication, will be an important dimension in your quest for success and happiness.

It is our sincere hope that success will be enhanced by the knowledge that all the magical man-made devices enabling instantaneous communication are still unable to convey what we humans alone are able to convey to each other: kindness, empathy, understanding, consideration, compassion and love.

One thing is certain. In spite of all our technological advances in the field of communication, the peoples on our planet have not yet learned to communicate with one another well enough to assure mankind's survival in the nuclear age. The ability to communicate effectively may well be your most important contribution to your future well-being, as well as that of your offspring. Indeed, the survival of the human race may well depend on it.

SENIORS CLASS OF '84

As graduation rapidly approaches, each member of the class of 1984 is faced with the realization that his or her high school career is drawing to a close. With feelings of accomplishment and success graduation also brings mixed emotions regarding leaving high school and entering the "real world". We look forward to growing up and accepting more responsibility as we continue our lives, yet it is difficult and frightening to leave the securities of home. Although high school ends with graduation, it is important for us to understand that education itself never ends. We must take advantage of the opportunities, as stated in The Open Letter to the American People by the National Commission on Excellence in Education, to "stretch our minds to the full capacity." We must do so "from early childhood through adulthood, learning more as the world itself changes."

We are tomorrow's leaders and the nation's posterity depends on the level of our education. We are in agreement with the Open Letter and we believe that we can control our own destiny and "take hold of our lives, apply our gifts and talents, work with dedication and self-discipline", or we can take an uninterested and uninspired attitude and be reduced to accepting futures "thrust upon us by others." Fermi High School has provided us with the opportunity to prepare for tomorrow and "take hold of our lives." Through the curriculum, each senior has been prepared to leave high school and face, head on, the never ending educational challenges.

The variety and depth of the college preparatory courses combined with an enthusiastic and dedicated faculty, has helped place many Fermi students in the college or university of their choice. Other students have opted to leave Fermi and go directly into the working world. Business courses and Industrial Education programs offer seniors the chance to graduate and find rewarding jobs. The food service and nurses' aide programs provide students the opportunity to acquire first hand experience in the restaurant and medical fields. The many art classes help to give aspiring painters and sculptors a headstart on their careers. Whether we choose to go on to college or straight to work, our years of study at Fermi have thoroughly prepared us for life after graduation.

Though our formal high school education stresses the academics, extra-curricular activities also play a substantial role. Just as our education does not end when we graduate, it should not stop when we leave the classroom. In order to leave high school as a well-rounded individual we must maintain a balance between academics and extra-curricular activities. Through Fermi's numerous offerings students must learn not only to deal effectively with their teachers, but also with their peers. In assuming leadership roles, students must understand and accept the concept of teamwork. Activities also occasion the students to meet new people and expand their interests. They must realize that in order for an activity to be successful, communication and cooperation skills need to be refined. In addition, the acceptance of responsibility teaches students to become reliable. These are all essential aspects in the growth process required by our society.

Therefore, participation in school, academically and socially, is vital to the development of a well-adjusted person. This is necessary to meet the increasing expectations that society demands of us as citizens. We must prepare for tomorrow today and we can be confident that the education extended to us at Fermi High School will contribute to our personal growth and enable us to be successful after graduation.

YOU CAN'T IGNORE
THE CLASS OF '84!

Fellow Classmates.

At this time, our final year at Fermi High School, a bid of farewell is not in order, but rather a wish for the future. This is a time when we must make our reach exceed our grasp, and we hopefully have established a sound foundation upon which to build. Although our directions and goals may vary, our principles and sense of values learned thus far in our lives, will direct us collectively and as individuals, to achieving success.

The word success will mean different things to different people, but whatever its meaning is to us as individuals, we can only achieve success through dedication and self discipline. When we work at our full capacity we are able to create our future and control our destiny. We must set our goals and arrange our priorities so as to make these goals achievable. Failure, in the true sense of the word, can only apply to those who never try, therefore, our efforts towards these goals will surely bring us success.

Every one of us has high expectations for the future, therefore we must convert every challenge into an opportunity. We have faced obstacles and difficulties in the past, and we have grown through learning. We will continue to grow as long as we resolve to see the challenges through.

Fermi Welcomes Six

Can you imagine packing up and leaving home to spend your senior year of high school in a foreign country? Can you imagine being thrust into a school of 1700 strange people? Can you imagine finding your way during opening day confusion, with only a computerized schedule as your guide? Can you imagine the sense of excitement and challenge of such an experience? And what about the courage demanded by this undertaking? Fermi's six exchange students know these feelings! These admirable young adults all ventured to America for a cultural exchange. Through the Youth for Understanding Student Exchange Program, Fermi welcomed: Angela Lenis of Columbia, Francis Sailer of Switzerland, Marie Capel of France, Annett Kahl of Germany, and Shelly Rickerby of Australia. In addition, Fermi also greeted Christina Tsao, a private student from Taiwan.

All of these students had the same basic reasons for wanting to come to the United States. Each felt that coming here would improve his/her skills in the use of the English language. Each was also excited by the prospects of meeting people from our country and seeing how our schools operate. Most importantly though, each expressed the idea of building independence and self-confidence as a beneficial goal.

Foreign Exchange Students

Shelley Rickerby

Annett Kahl

Angela Lenis

There are many factors involved in the selection process of who will gain the opportunity of visiting the United States. The students must have a written recommendation from a teacher and a sound academic record. He/she must also fill out an application which asks for a general background. It is also not an uncommon request for the students to complete a detailed essay outlining why he/she wants to become an exchange student. After that, the student must be interviewed and accepted by a Youth For Understanding representative, and, finally, a physical exam must be passed.

After the successful completion of the selection process, our foreign exchange students are placed with host families here in Enfield. Many adjustments have to be made by the students and the host families alike. Getting used to American food, manners, customs, beliefs, dress, social behavior, morals, and just about anything else you can think of, must be very difficult — at the start anyway. However, adjustments were made; flexibility and a sense of humor as well as a sincere desire to learn and be accepted were required. The host families did whatever they could do to speed up this process and to insure a comfortable, secure, and successful transition.

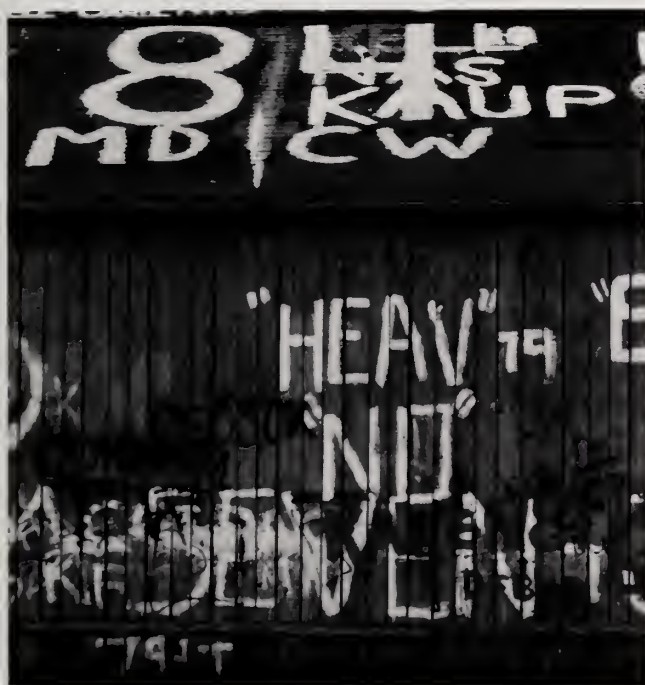

Our foreign exchange students have assimilated themselves into our school system and into our hearts. They have become our friends and our allies, despite our many differences. They perceive many contrasting practices in our schools. For example, the rules, the hours, the classes, and the teaching procedures are much different, and it takes time to get used to them. One thing they all enjoy is our wide selection of school activities. It seems in America it is much easier to get involved. Angela and Marle have both joined the field hockey team. Francis is looking forward to running with the cross country team and Annett has joined the volleyball team, while Shelly has put her talents to use on the literary magazine staff. Christlna spends much of her time concentrating on her studies as she plans to attend college in the United States next year.

Fermi's staff and students are all very proud of these six young adults. Not only have they learned about our culture, but they have taught us about theirs as well. We have all benefited from the presence of these courageous travelers. We wish them luck and know they will succeed in opening many other doors in the future.

Barn painting — 1984!

The target — an as yet undiscovered barn!

Being an individual allows one to convey his or her spirit in a variety of ways. One of the more popular ways the Falcons display and communicate their class spirit is through the art of barn painting. This has become a tradition since Enfield has an abundance of barns due to its long history in the Connecticut valley tobacco industry. These once proud symbols of a prosperous trade are now relegated to serve as a medium for Falcon expression. Barn painting generates comradery and merriment among seniors. The basic motive behind this devilish act is FUN! It is done in innocence, with pride, and in the spirit of friendly class rivalry.

In the dead of the night, a clandestine army carefully plans its attack. Its weapons — brushes, ladders, and cans of paint. The target — an as yet undiscovered barn. However, this is a difficult prospect because this is a popular strategy. Yet, no matter if a "clean" barn can be located or a well-covered one is secured, it will be evident that the new barn painting done by the Class of 1984 will not be outdone. The names, slogans, numbers and sentiments of this year's graduating class will surely be the largest, the brightest and the best.

The graffiti of barn painting night will always be remembered. It is a statement for all to see. It is an indelible mark upon the future made by the Class of 1984 — mission accomplished!

Sports

Academics are important to the growth of the mind; however the benefits gained from participating in a sport also help an individual to grow. Physical exercise builds stamina, coordination, and strength, and these qualities, coupled with the achievement of a positive attitude, provide the balance to create a successful person. Through sports an individual learns the importance of communication and commitment to others as well as the need for persistence, desire, time, and effort to accomplish personal goals. In turn, the athlete learns to accept and cope with success and disappointment.

The athletic program at Fermi offers its students the opportunity to take part in a variety of sports throughout the school year. Not only are the physical rewards of participating in sports valuable to the athlete, but also there is the reward of a sense of belonging to a group of young adults who share a common interest. Furthermore, the friendly atmosphere among athletes adds to the enjoyment of playing and to the comradery shared with players of competing teams. The fun attained through hard work surpasses all other achievements.

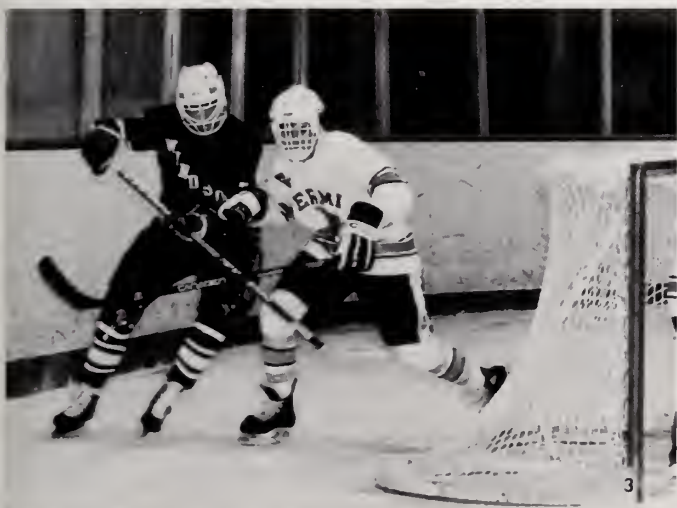

The student who takes full advantage of extra-curricular activities will attain a well-rounded education. "Take hold of your life, apply your gifts and talents, work with dedication and self-discipline. Have high expectations for yourself and convert every challenge into an opportunity." These words of advice from the Commission of Excellence in Education are to be well taken! The emphasis remains on the student and his/her choice to pursue an education, both academically and nonacademically.

1. Tracy Cofiell performs one of the more difficult dives in good form.
2. After passing the ball, Lisa Hoinoski charges down court to follow up on her play.
3. Fermi's soccer players always "stick together."
4. Jill LeDoux and Ann Magleora exhibit the comradery that builds a winning team!
5. Theresa Tracy supports the home team when a touchdown is scored.
6. Collette Normandin skillfully moves the ball down the field.

Sports' Candid

1. To check on the team's progress, Marc Levine and Coach Bacewicz keep their eyes on the upcoming play.

Deadline time in yearbook. It happens four times a year.

"It's almost 4:30 p.m.! Where's page 176? We have to have it! We have to make the post office by 5:00! Cheryl and Kathy, can you please finish typing those captions... and, oh yeah, Doug, are all the pictures cropped for the activities section?"

What else were we supposed to do? O.K., check the list — captions, page 176, cropping, writeups. WRITEUPS!

"Hey Kathy, how's your writeup coming along? Miss de Haan wanted it yesterday!"

Confusion. Organized confusion! There's so much to do!

"Marie, can you check the supplies and see what we'll need for the next deadline? Marisa, how many ads do we have so far?"

Okay — we're in good shape for this deadline, except for page 176.

"Has anyone found page 176 yet? Heidi, what is on page 176 on the ladder diagram? ... You found it? Great!"

Now that that's over with... Let's see...

"Matt, we need some photos of seniors — can you snap a few candid for us? Oh, and Missy, we need another falcon! Help!"

Anyone who is a member of a yearbook staff knows this scenario well! It's all part of the job! Deadlines. Pressure. Tension. Responsibility.

Layouts must be designed with consistency and continuity, graphics must be drawn, pictures must be sorted and cropped correctly, captions and writeups for specific sections must also be completed. Everything must be checked and rechecked, typed and retyped in triplicate.

The hard work and commitment that goes into designing and creating a yearbook is not realized or recognized! The editors of Traces 1984 must see that all these duties are performed smoothly. This task is not an easy one. Many times there are problems with work being completed to specific instructions, and yes, in a room with fifteen different personalities there are bound to be conflicts. But through these rough times, each person on the staff sees a change within himself/herself.

Each must learn to accept responsibility. Each must follow through with the accepted responsibility. Each must learn to deal with others, including staff and faculty members, patrons, photographers, and publishers. Each staffer has learned the rewards of contributing something to their class — the memories of the good times at Fermi! These traits will be carried with each staff member to their future successes.

Though yearbook is hard work, there is one obvious reason people join. It's just plain fun! We have a great time working together. The absolute necessity of a sense of humor is inevitably put to test. The laughter and the sense of esprit de corps make the work load lighter. It seems as if a family unit has been created and the working together for one common goal — the best possible yearbook — is the supreme accomplishment.

Although the majority of the responsibility of pulling the yearbook together lies within the staff itself, production is extremely important. For this reason we would like to say thank you to our photographer, Larry Grenier, who gladly accepts all the assignments we give him, and our Taylor Publishing representative, Denny Galvin, for all his advice concerning printing decisions. The yearbook staff would especially like to express our sincere thanks and gratitude to our advisor, Miss Monica de Haan, for her endless patience, without whom Traces 1984 would be impossible. For all the times we didn't say it — thank you Miss de Haan.
